THE FOURTH AND HOW IT WAS CELEBRATED.—The thirty-second annual national holiday occurred on Saturday. It was a dull Fourth of July, compared with former years. The weather was extremely hot, the thermometer standing among the fifties; the sun peeped forth from the darkened clouds, its brilliancy was obscured by the approach of night. The exodus from the city on Friday was great, and to a stranger in our midst to have witnessed the departure of the many thousands from the numerous railroad depots and steamboat docks, it would have appeared that the whole city was getting out of town in search of a more quiet and less heated place. There being no public demonstration, the citizens celebrated the day to suit their several tastes. The children enjoyed themselves with crackers, torpedoes, etc.

Company A, 7th reg. Artillery, Captain Brady, fired a national salute of thirty-seven guns at sunrise. Salutes were also fired at noon and sunset. The fire-bells were also rung in the same intervals.

The display of the military was creditable. The line was formed on Broad street, the right resting on Poplar, and the division moved at about half-past twelve over the public square. The whole under the command of Major-General Charles M. Prevost, First City Troop, Keystone Battery, Washington Grays, National Guards, Gray Scouts, Baxier's Zouaves, Philadelphia City Guard.

The Washington Grays were in their summer fatigues uniform, but were not out in their strength. The National Guards had thinned ranks, many of the members having left the city. The Reserve under command of Colonel Mitchell, were rather strong, and looked well; while Baxier's Zouaves, and the Philadelphia City Guard, the latter under the command of Colonel S. Clair A. Mulholland—made a splendid appearance.

The soldiers of the war of 1812 met in the Supreme Court Room, Alderman Peter Hayes presiding, and after adopting a number of appropriate resolutions, elected the following officers for the year: President—Peter Hayes.

Vice-Presidents—Captain William T. Elder, James Peters, Colonel John Witt, Colonel Joseph S. Rilly, Colonel Francis Cooper, Colonel John Agnew, Colonel J. P. Leister, Captain John Wilson.

Recording Secretary—Hiram Ayres. Corresponding Secretary—John H. Frick. Assistant Secretary—General Chas. M. Prevost. Treasurer—John H. Frick.

Executive Committee—Colonel John Thomson, Captain Jacob H. Fisher, Colonel G. G. Childs, Robert O'Neal, General John Davis, of Bucks county, Charles Lombard and Joshua M. Bechtel.

Colonel Joseph S. Rilly then read the Declaration of Independence in an impressive manner, after which the meeting adjourned.

At sunrise a bonfire was kindled in the Schuylkill ward, and the smoke rose to the breeze at Fifth and Federal streets, witnessed by a large number of persons. A national salute was fired about the same time; also, a salute in the evening.

The firemen took great delight on the Fourth in decorating their engine houses. We noticed many beautiful decorations, among the number the Independence House and Steam Fire Engine house, Marion House house, Diligent Engine and Empire Hook and Ladder Companies' houses. The United Fire and Marine Insurance Company christened their new carriage at the fire on Christian street, below Sixth, on the Fourth.

The Democratic Association of Pennsylvania celebrated the day at their headquarters, Ninth and Arch streets. Mr. Edward H. Well read the Declaration of Independence, and addresses were delivered by Mr. Charles Backwalter and Mr. George M. Dallas.

The Young Men's Democratic Association of the Fifteenth Ward threw to the breeze a large and beautiful flag. Speeches were made by several of the members.

The Catholic Platonian Literary Institute met in the Cathedral School House, and was addressed by Mr. John H. Campbell, Mr. James Beilly read the Declaration of Independence. Short speeches were made by members of the society.

The James Page Library Company fired a salute at sunrise. At 10 o'clock the immortal Declaration was read and orations delivered.

The Society of the Cincinnati of Pennsylvania held their annual meeting in the morning at No. 1105 Walnut street, and the meeting was fairly attended. After transacting the usual routine of business, the society, at 6 o'clock in the evening, sat down to a sumptuous banquet, discussed various topics of interest, drank toasts, and made speeches, etc.

A very large concourse of people attended the opening ceremonies inaugurating the Republican Wigwag on the Fourth. An appropriate and earnest prayer was offered, and Dr. Parrish spoke over an hour. It was James M. Scovel made an elaborate and brilliant speech. The meeting adjourned at 2 P. M.

Quite a number of our citizens spent the day out of town. The upper row to Bristol, Burlington, and other places, carried full complements of passengers, and the places named contained thousands of holiday visitors. The Falls, Laurel Hill, Washington Retreat, and other places along the Schuylkill were crowded with people, and many children; but of all the places Fairmount Park was the general resort, and it may be safely said that ten thousand persons visited the grounds during the day. The city squares were also thronged.

The young men of Nicetown gave a grand picnic at Thompson's Grove, Sixth and Venango streets, which was largely attended, the festivities closing with a display of fireworks. A large picnic ball over building, and three a la mode, were treated with the aid of operators. The ladies and gentlemen scattered promiscuously, but fortunately no damage was done.

The display of fireworks in the evening was grand. Broad street, from Chestnut to Walnut, was crowded with citizens, who congratulated there on witness the beautiful display of fireworks made by the Gun and League. Their building was illuminated, and a band of music was stationed on the balcony played national airs, Revolving, bells, rockets, etc. The display was witnessed by the beautiful display of fireworks made by the Gun and League. The display was excellent, and afforded amusement to those congregated for nearly two hours.

THE FOURTH AT RIVINGTON.—As usual at this beautiful summer resort, the national day was celebrated with all honors. The principal feature being the annual regatta of the Rivington Yacht Club, which, though it had not taken on previous occasions, was none the less a most interesting. Only three classes were represented, and especially in the first, composed of the yachts Fittler, Mystery, and Lillie, great interest and excitement prevailed. The Mystery always victorious with again rigged, to compete with the new and formidable Fittler, little thinking of her third antagonist, the Lillie, which was by them considered harmless and by some almost ignored, but whose owner nevertheless had spared no pains and fitted her out with a complete new suit.

At half-past 9 o'clock the three boats were put in position, the Lillie having drawn first choice, and at the word "start" darted off leaving the other two in the dust. The Mystery, however, and continuing to strain on them, coming in eight minutes ahead of the Fittler and winning the first prize.

In the second class a like interest prevailed, the yachts "Eagle" and "Wren" against a fleet of six boats, and a bidding for yards astera, for her numerous collection, this boat making the fastest time of all in the race.

In the third class the race was awarded to the "Green," which, through the entire course, until her antagonists were in the distance, was her captain having heard the dinner bell from the boarding-house preferring a substantial meal to a hot and uncertain sail and perhaps afraid of inheriting that awful "little dog" still in possession of Captain Smith, of the "Wren."

The prizes consisted of magnificent pieces of silver plate, which were presented by Mr. E. W. Beaman, with an appropriate speech.

At 10 o'clock the boats were again won the first choice, a beautiful silver water-cooler.
